shows proposed reorganization of Utah County Government. The change was suggested by the Utah County Government Study Commission.

Utah Co. Government Committee favors 4-man council on of a seven-member council and an executive are two changes proposed by the Utah County Government Study Commission. The plan was submitted to the Utah County Board on July 2, the Study Commission gave its final draft of an official plan for Utah County government. The plan will be included on a ballot for approval of Utah county voters. The plan provides for separation powers. The county government will be held by a seven member County Council. An elected County Executive would have executive and appointive powers. The plan would be the consolidation of county offices into administrative departments. The proposed County Council would be elected from four districts in the county. According to the report this type of council would be responsive to the people it represents. It could have a broader policy-making capacity. As the legislative body of the Utah County Council would hold all legislative and policy-making powers in the county. The elected full-time county executive is to be appointed by the county executive to be a single unifying responsible head of county government. The report states that this type of head CC would promote a comprehensive balanced view of county interests with a focus on all real problems, policy leadership and coordination. The major changes in the plan is the merging of several county offices into administrative departments. This would mean the merging of four departments, three with elected heads and one with an appointed head. The plan would have a finance department including

Carter grin penetrates Madison Square smog

By WALTER R. MEARS, AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — With Jimmy Carter smiling over the scene, Democrats joined in a unity chorus Monday as they polished their image for opening night at the national convention that will make him their presidential nominee and ratify his choice of a running mate.

Carter had plenty to grin about.

While the big political show opened at Madison Square Garden, the power was at the Americana Hotel, where the former Georgia governor auditioned vice presidential prospects and received party elders — who once discounted him as a candidate without a chance.

"You know Gov. Carter is the candidate of this party," said Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who long had hoped for another chance himself. "I urge you to back our candidate in an enthusiastic way," the 1968 nominee told Minnesota delegates.

Carter concluded his interviews with seven vice presidential prospects, discussing the job with Sens. Frank Church of Idaho and Adlai E. Stevenson III of Illinois. He kept his own counsel about the choice, saying it won't be disclosed until after his own nomination Wednesday night.

The others are Sens. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, John Glenn of Ohio and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, and Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr. of New Jersey.

There was only one controversy in sight, and

Carter was working to smooth that over, talking with women delegates about compromise settlement of their demand for a rules change to guarantee equal representation of women in delegations to the 1980 convention.

They originally wanted a 50 per cent rule, but agreed to stop short of a push for such a quota system if the convention orders an effort to insure equality. One-third of the current Democratic delegates are women.

Carter met with Church, then said the Idaho senator ranks high among the vice presidential finalists. "Despite his youth, he has been in Congress a long time," Carter, 51, said of Church, 51.

Mondale, who had his vice presidential interview at Carter's home in Plains, Ga.,

Jimmy Carter Presidential candidate said he wasn't campaigning to be on the ticket. "This is a judgment that Gov. Carter has to make on his own," the Minnesota senator said. "I have indicated I would accept if he asked me. He has not, and I don't think it's appropriate to campaign."

Y has two delegates at convention

Two members of the BYU community are among the 18 Utah delegates to the National Democratic Convention which began Monday.

Dr. Stewart L. Grow, professor of history and political science, and Don Davis, 24 year-old senior majoring in political science, were present when party chairman Robert Strauss called the Madison Square Garden group to order.

This may be the first participation in the complicated political process for Davis, but it certainly isn't for Dr. Grow.

The BYU professor has been a delegate to local conventions many times over the years. He was also one of four presidential electors in December 1974.

Chairman Strauss expects the convention to be far more orderly this year than it has been in the past.

"I don't believe the American public is going to demand that we have violence as we did in 1968 to have a good convention. In 1972, we were shrill, vitriolic, mean, bitter, and we stayed all night," Strauss said.

"This year we have a candidate who has captured the imagination of this country and defeated 15 or so rivals," he continued, referring to Democratic hopeful Jimmy Carter.

Democrats are ready to talk about issues instead of argue with each other. The Democratic conflicts are past, he said.

Jimmy Carter said he won't announce his choice for running mate until "I'm sure who the choice for president is going to be."

Christians shell Tripoli

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian leaders claimed Monday to have pushed to within "grenade-throwing distance" of Tripoli, the largest Moslem-held Lebanese city.

Leftist leaders said Syria has threatened to occupy Beirut and the southern leftist-held port of Sidon. The Moslems said Syria was continuing its "savage shelling" of two Palestinian refugee camps on the edge of Tripoli and had also attacked Moslem forces in eastern and southern Lebanon.

Sources in Damascus said Syrian President Hafez Assad had been empowered by the ruling Socialist Baath party to use up to 50,000 troops, plus armor and air power, to restore peace in Lebanon within one year. So far he has committed 13,000 troops and 450 tanks.

The Christian radio said Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat met with a Christian officer to discuss "unconditional withdrawal from areas of fighting," but the Palestinian command denied the report.

Security and hospital reports said 200 persons died in 24 hours. More than 32,000 have been killed in 15 months of fighting in Lebanon.

Arab foreign ministers were meeting in Cairo, but Arafat received no reply to pleas for Arab help to stop the Christian-Syrian advance.

Syrian troops are dug in near the three main

Palestinian-leftist strongholds of West Beirut, Sidon and the northern ports of Tripoli, stifling operations by the Moslems while Lebanese Christians continue to push north out of their 800-square-mile enclave north of Beirut.

Christian leaders said Monday they had cleared the last leftist strongholds out of the northern region of Koura, just south of Tripoli.

Syria is trying to force the Palestinians and Lebanese leftists to negotiate with the Christians for an end to the war.

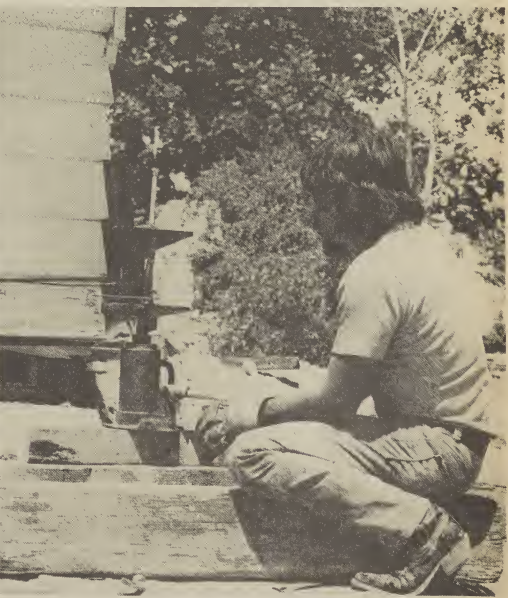

Execs discuss budget, bylaws

After some confusion about who had the authority to call the session to order when ASBYU Pres. Randy Sloat was more than ten minutes late, the Executive Council discussed budgets and bylaws in their Thursday meeting. Sterling Jensen, finance vice president, reported that half of the officers had not spent the money in their budgets the way they had budgeted it. Sloat reminded the council, "If we don't spend our money in the summer, we won't get it back in the fall."

Former Atty. Gen. Chris Burdick read the new bylaws which concerned the Social, Academic and Women's offices. The Social Office bylaws said that the office "shall submit a prospectus and expense breakdown of all programs and expenditures for the year." Another bylaw said that all Social Office profits unspent at the end of the winter semester will be placed in the ASBYU Unallocated Account.

The other bylaws dealt with the responsibilities of the vice president of academics and the role of the Women's Office.

'Year of Decision' forum topic today

Pauline Frederick, a noted woman journalist, will be the forum speaker in the de Jong Concert Hall at 10 a.m. today.

The "Year of Decision" will be Miss Frederick's topic. Her talk will focus on the important challenges facing the next president of the United States.

Such significant matters as international interdependence, relations between industrial and emerging nations; and the problems of proliferation of nuclear power, human rights, energy, and pollution, will be discussed by Miss Frederick. "Once we've made the big decision, and that is the election of the president, then we need to get involved in a host of other decisions," Miss Frederick said.

Academy Square representatives have estimated that about half the necessary parking must be obtained through the purchase of off-site land.

Tenant rules have been established by the city commission with the intent of helping businesses that are dislocated to have first choice in the improved development.

When business proprietors in the area south of the project were contacted, they indicated little or no knowledge of the effect the project might have on them.

Defense motions denied

By BILL BEECHAM
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Defense motions seeking dismissal of a sex soliciting charge against Rep. Allan T. Howe, D-Utah, were denied Monday by a City Court Judge, paving the way for Howe's trial on the misdemeanor next Monday.

Howe's lawyer Dean Mitchell claimed his client's constitutional rights were violated by police entrapment when he was arrested June 12 after talking with two police decoy prostitutes.

Howe, who appeared in court with his wife Marlene, is accused of offering the decoys $20 for sexual acts. He has acknowledged talking with them, but has denied the charge.

Mitchell also contended prosecutorial misconduct occurred when City Atty. Roger F. Cutler was quoted by newspapers following Howe's arrest. In court last week Mitchell read reports quoting Cutler as being critical of Howe.

"If, in fact those statements were made, it does attack the credibility of a witness in the case," Uno said.

Then, Monday, however, he said, if such misconduct did occur, it should be dealt with by others, such as a bar association.

Uno also denied several other defense motions to dismiss the charge.

The arrest was in Salt Lake City's red-light district known for prostitutes, both real and decoy. Howe has pleaded innocent all ways. He was lured to the area on pretenses of a political meeting.

Uno ruled the police department's decoys program is constitutional, "based on case law that I've read."

The defense also was trying to show that Howe's right to fair trial was jeopardized by excessive pretrial publicity. Seven news organizations were subpoenaed along with their materials.

The judge accepted for review some of the subpoenaed published articles, videotapes, tape recordings and affidavits from these organizations. But he stressed he would only accept material that has been published or aired and not reporters' notes and off-the-record conversations.

Mitchell argued he wanted to keep the matter of pretrial publicity open and Uno gave him until Wednesday to submit a brief. But the judge declined in the meantime to dismiss the charge.

Howe sat silently at the defense table during the hour-long hearing. Mrs. Howe, who has supported her husband since he was charged, sat nearby.

The Howes did not talk to newsmen.

Asked if he intended to appeal Uno's rulings, Mitchell told a reporter.

"I haven't made up my mind. I've not had a chance to think about it."

During last Wednesday's hearing, the two decoy prostitutes, Margaret Hamblin and Kathleen Taylor, asserted that Howe offered to pay them for sex. They quoted Howe as saying, "I usually go about $20."

Concorde flight to U.S. successful

WASHINGTON — The controversial Concorde, its flights watched closely by environmentalists and the Federal Aviation Administration, is making money on flights to the United States, spokesmen for two airlines said Monday.

One of the British-French built supersonic jetliner to nearby Dulles International Airport from Paris and London have attracted many more passengers than necessary to warrant permanent routes, the airline officials said.

Under a 16-month test approved by Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr., Air France is flying three Concorde in and out of Dulles each week. British Airways has two weekly flights.

While both airlines say they could live with passenger loads of about 60 per cent of capacity, Air France reports figures nearer 90 per cent and British Airways 100 per cent for Concorde flights since late May.

Mercenary not judged on own case?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Daniel Gearhart, who signed up to fight as a mercenary and was executed by an Angolan firing squad, was not judged at his trial on his own case, his attorney said Monday.

"The main thrust of the trial was directed toward any government which it was felt condoned this mercenary activity," Robert Censer told a news conference.

The 34-year-old Gearhart, a Vietnam war veteran from Kensington, Md., had claimed he never had a chance to fight in Angola before he was captured by Cuban troops. He had advertised his services as a mercenary in Soldier of Fortune magazine. Censer said it is "difficult to determine" whether the executions of Gearhart and three British mercenaries were in any way retaliation for a United States vote against admitting Angola to the United Nations.

Mexico denounces Israeli raid

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Mexico told the United Nations Monday that Israel's commando rescue of more than 100 hostages from Uganda a week ago creates "precedents of incalculable danger for all civilized coexistence."

In a letter to the president of the Security Council, Mexican Ambassador Roberto de Rosenzweig Diaz denounced the Israeli action as "a flagrant violation" of the U.N. Charter and "universally accepted principles of international law."

Mask Club ready for children's play

Mask Club will present two plays to disabled children Wednesday at 11 a.m.

The performances will take place at the park between Center and 150 North, according to Tracy Evans, one of the directors of the plays.

Adapted versions of "Winnie the Pooh" and "The Reluctant Dragon" will be presented to the disabled students at St. Francis school.

Genealogists will converge on Y for August conference

The Eleventh Annual Priesthood Genealogy Seminar of the LDS Church will bring genealogists from all over the world to BYU Aug. 2-6.

The seminar is sponsored by the Genealogy Department of the church and the Division of Continuing Education of the church Educational System.

The seminar will be directed by Elder Theodore M. Burton, assistant to the Council of the Twelve and Alton E. Sigman, Administrator of Adult Programs for Special Courses and Conferences.

Genealogy specialists from BYU, the Church Genealogy Department and from as far away as Washington, D.C. will be attending. Colleen Hadley, secretary for Special Courses, said James D. Walker of the National Archives in Washington D.C. will attend.

The seminar is in need of 150 to 200 monitors. Duties of these monitors will be to check for ID tags, inform registrants of other classes available and help instructors during class, Jim Tingen, microfilms clerk said.

Qualifications for the monitors are that they must be able to work for at least four hours a day and be dependable. In return for monitoring, attendance at any class will be free, Tingen said.

Further information about monitoring, is available from Jim Tingen, in 428 HRL Library or ext. 3933.

Registration for the conference may be completed through Special Courses and Conferences in 242 HRCB. Registration for the seminar is $15, Miss Hadley said.

This year for the first time, the seminar will include evening classes. Fees will be $3 for singles and $5 for couples for each evening. This does not include the price for the syllabus.

Registration for the evening classes will be in the Main Ballroom of the ELWC one hour prior to class. Participants may register for one evening at a time or for the series. Classes begin at 6 p.m. and go until 10 p.m.

Finalization of registration for those who register in advance and arrive before the start of the seminar will take place in the Morris Center. Those arriving any time after 9 p.m. Aug. 1, will finalize in the Main Ballroom of the ELWC between 7-8 a.m. Aug. 2.

Classes will include handwriting seminars concerning family records, youth classes and classes in Spanish and Portuguese.

Seminar participants who wish to live on campus during the event will be housed in campus residence halls and eat in campus cafeterias. Housing information can be obtained from Special Courses and Conferences.

Devotionals will be conducted daily at 8 a.m. Speakers will include Elder Franklin D. Richards and Elder W. Grant Bangerter, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve.

Y makes film on gutsy miler

A BYU movie crew returned from Albuquerque this week after three weeks of filming a movie on an Olympic hopeful stricken by cancer.

The movie is the story of John Baker, the record-breaking University of New Mexico miler, who devoted the final months of his life to coaching kids after his Olympic hopes were dashed by cancer.

The 30-minute film is being made for use by schools and youth organizations throughout the nation.

The movie is now being edited and a premiere showing will be held in November.

Director Douglas Johnson said he had never seen anything like the community response during the filming. About 99 percent of the cast was from Albuquerque, including 80 children from the John Baker School, formerly Aspen School, which was named in honor of the heroic athlete.

David Carson, a Hollywood actor who took the part of Baker, is the same size as Baker and during the filming actually wore some of Baker's clothes. He also wore Baker's good luck piece.

Many of the townspeople have vivid recollections of Baker, and they said the similarity was eerie, Johnson reported. "Some of the kids couldn't look at Carson because of their tender memories. His speech, actions, and mannerisms all reminded them of Baker. School teachers and officials who worked with Baker were almost upset about it."

Especially helpful in giving the film authentic insights into Baker's life and character were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Baker, a brother, Robert, and sister, Jill.

The story is based on "John Baker's Last Race," taken from William J. Buchanan's article which appeared in the August 1975 issue of the Reader's Digest. Buchanan, also from Albuquerque, was a consultant during the filming.

As a Lobo runner, Baker broke six state track records and was acclaimed the finest miler ever produced in the state.

Upon graduation in 1966, he received several college coaching offers but accepted a job as coach at the Aspen Elementary School and started preparing for the 1972 Olympics.

Baker's concern for children, his fairness, and ability to motivate soon made him a favorite among youth. Then in 1969 he was stricken by cancer. Doctors gave him six months to live, and he decided to devote what time he had left "to the kids" - especially the handicapped. Despite pain and nausea, he helped coach the Duke City Dashers, an Albuquerque track club for girls. There he met a sister of one of the girls, Stephanie Keel, 3½ years old, an osteomyelitis victim who doctors feared would have to lose a leg if she didn't exercise.

Baker took her under his wing and motivated her into activity. Today she holds a number of state track records in her age group.

The Dashers were finally invited to the AAU meet but Baker never lived to see them compete.

Ford, Demo convention to compete for viewers

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford is losing his television adviser, but that won't stop him from seeking TV exposure at baseball's All-Star Game—a rival of the Democratic Convention for the national viewing audience.

Formal word of the impending resignation of television adviser Robert Mead, a former CBS producer, came Monday. At the same briefing White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford will fly to Philadelphia tonight to throw out the first ball of the annual All-Star competition between the American and National Leagues.

A number of television critics have written that the All-Star game to be broadcast live by the ABC network, is almost certain to draw more viewers than the simultaneous Democratic convention coverage of CBS and NBC.

Rain won't cancel preference events

Preference activities will continue, even if it rains, according to Kate Walker, social executive assistant for the Women's Office.

If it rains, the picnic will be cancelled, but other activities will continue as planned, she said. Tickets are $2.50 per couple and can be bought at the third floor ticket office of the Wilkinson Center.

Miss Walker stressed that dress for the dance is casual.

Vandalism estimate: $25,000

By DAVE BECKSTRAND
Universe Staff Writer

A million and a half people will visit the Uinta National Forest during the coming year, causing an estimated $25,000 property damage. National parks are becoming more popular every year, according to Sherma Bierhaus, superintendent of the Timpanogos Cave National Monument, and increased crowds means more damage.

recreation in the Pleasant Grove Ranger District. In 1974, the American Fork-Provo Canyon area's vandalism cost reached the $5,000 mark. Furthermore, said Ekins, "The disregard for national forests can cost up to $600 per year in law enforcement needs."

Forest fires

Fires cause the most damage in vandalism with many National Parks, such as the Grand Canyon, prohibiting all open and charcoal fires except in specified areas, said Ekins. More than half of all forest fires in National Parks are caused by carelessness and people starting fires in undesignated areas, he said. Ekins told of an incident where a teenage boy who was mad at his girlfriend set a trash trolley on fire. "Trash containers need to be painted two or three times a year because of fire damage," he said. The 16-18 age group is responsible for most of the damage, said Ekins. "Much of the vandalism occurs two weeks before high school graduation on 'senior stuff day' with such antics as taking old cars up the canyon and shooting them off the side, shooting signs or knocking over road signs," he continued. Graffiti, once a major problem, has almost disappeared in the American Fork Canyon area. "We would find out who wrote it, sometimes by what they wrote, and then make them clean it off themselves," Ekins recalled.

Ekins expressed hope that children growing up during the "Woodsey Owl" period will help convert their parents. "Woodsey Owl, the replacement for Smokey the Bear, teaches children to care about littering and pollution problems. Bierhaus said that Timpanogos Cave has been visited by 20,192 people during the first six months of 1976 as compared to 14,893 during the same period of 1975.

Tour size limited

"In order to provide quality tours and protect the cave's ecosystem, tour size must be limited," Bierhaus stated. "The policy several years ago was to let everyone go through the cave without making reservations," Bierhaus said. "This, however, led to a great deal of vandalism because the guide couldn't keep track of everyone," she continued. "Thus, many items from the cave were stolen during the tour," Bierhaus said. Tour size reduction has helped the situation immensely, according to Bierhaus, but the problem of vandalism still exists. "Already this year, windows have been broken and tour signs stolen with the replacement cost running into hundreds of dollars," Bierhaus concluded. Ekins, who has been with the Forest Service for 16 years, told of the ways a person can cooperate in controlling vandalism.

Relief bill- 'Forgotten Friar' $$$ at last is topic of lecture for Idaho

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has signed into the law the public works appropriation bill which contains a $200 million appropriation to reimburse victims of the Teton Dam flood in Eastern Idaho. Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Monday.

Idaho's congressional delegation said the $200 million appropriation is intended as a down payment to pay the damages to personal property suffered when the government-built dam collapsed June 5, unleashing 80 billion gallons of water down-stream. The resultant flood caused 11 deaths and an estimated $1 billion damage in a 100-mile swath down the Teton and Snake River Valleys.

A lecture on "The Forgotten Friar: The Untold Story of Fray Dominguez" will be the final event of the summer series of the BYU Alumni College.

The lecture, to be held Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Alumni House, will feature Dr. Ted Warner, chairman of the BYU History Department. Dr. Warner will trace the steps of the famed Dominguez-Escalante expedition that passed through Utah 200 years ago.

The lecture will center around Fray Francisco Antonio Dominguez, a Franciscan monk who was "visitor general and commissary" of 25 Catholic missions in the late 18th century. Dominguez was the real leader of the so-called Escalante expedition through Utah.

Dr. Warner says many people are unaware that Dominguez was the actual leader of that expedition. Utahns traditionally honored Fray Silvestre Velez de Escalante as a leader. He was, however, actually a junior partner to Fray Dominguez. Dr. Warner says. Father Escalante has received most of the credit historically because he wrote the journal which researchers use as the major source of information about the expedition.

As a result, many Utah landmarks including a mountain range, forest, desert, river, canyon, park and city have been named in honor of Father Escalante. Dr. Warner notes in this respect, Father Dominguez has become a "forgotten friar."

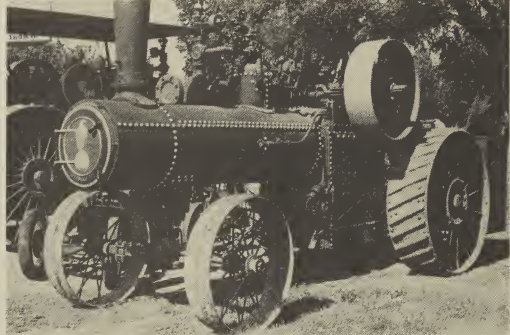

Dr. Warner joined the BYU faculty in 1962 and is a member of the Dominguez-Escalante State-Federal Bicentennial Committee. He has published numerous articles and book reviews in professional historical journals.

Orem tractor display: Age of Steam revisited

Some of the most unusual steam engines used during late 1800s and early 1900s are on display in Orem during July. The five steam tractors, which were used in Utah fields in the late 1800's, have been salvaged and rebuilt by private collectors. All are in working condition. The display is located at 546 S. State in Orem.

Responsible for the collection is Anton (Tony) Rohbock, a local machanic who is noted for collecting and rebuilding steam engines. Rohbock was the 1976 winner of the Utah Governor's Craftsmanship Award. The oldest tractor on display is an 1893 J.I. Case Farmington. Another tractor on display is the 1915 J.I. Case 65 HP, restored by Cameron L. Thorpe of Gunnison. The engine originally came from Teton, Idaho and was purchased from Idaho State Sen. Richard Egbert. It was built in 1915 and weighs approximately 12 tons. One display also is an Advance Rumely restored by Shelton Parker of Salt Lake. It is a small engine made from scraps of various other engines.

Once this metal monster belched smoke and fire as it plowed through Utah farmsteads. But now it stands in mute splendor in an Orem display.

Tractor history

Steam tractors were first built in 1876. The grain they harvested was ground by mills in the homes. Since that time, things have changed a great deal. "We want to show people how lucky they are," said Rohbock. During these early times a whistle code was used as a means of communications. One long blast meant work will begin, two long blasts, work completed for the day, one short blast, stop threshing machine, two short blasts, start threshing machines, three short blasts, more grain boxes needed. Other combinations signaled a variety of other messages.

Jim McGregor instructs youngster in Special Courses and Conferences swim class. Registration is now being held for a new session which will begin July 19.

Tots splish-splash in swimming class

Pre-schoolers are not too young to enjoy swimming lessons if their enthusiasm over the Special Courses and Conferences swimming lessons is any indicator. "It's fun, I can swim 12 feet now," said Brett Kay, 6. "It's fun to drop off the diving board." "I like it," said Jaime Le Duke, 6. "They taught me how to do the Deadman's Flop."

The boy and girl are two of 180 enthusiastic children bobbing, floating and splashing in the Helaman Hall's swimming pool mornings Monday through Thursday. Parents seem to be just as excited about the program as their children. Mrs. Paulette Le Duke, mother of Jaime, said, "Children aren't taught swimming early enough and when they get older they are afraid of the water. It's a good idea to teach them young."

Food supply shortage, drought cause drastic price increase

The critical world shortage of food supplies and Europe's current drought will lead to front-page food prices, according to BYU economist and commodities specialist. "During the past two months, corn, wheat, cocoa, and meat prices have jumped dramatically," according to Merrill J. Bateman, dean of the Graduate School of Management. "Food supplies as well as dairy and cattle herds have also decreased from former levels. The current low reserves will not supplement the anticipated food needs of European nations, currently experiencing a drought. Exporting American crops will in turn decrease the supply in this country and push prices up."

The large fluctuation in basic commodity prices will be discussed at a Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner, & Smith and BYU co-sponsored futures market conference July 14 - 16 at Snowbird resort. Leading commodities experts from throughout the nation will discuss inflation and futures hedging with regard to specific commodities including cocoa, sugar, lumber, plywood, grains, fats, oils, metals, meats, and the money markets. Topics that will be discussed include information systems, research, forecasting models, buying and selling strategies, and accounting procedures. "Since 1972 commodity prices on average have doubled," according to Bateman. Corn, for example, has gone from a 1972 level of $1.25 per bushel to a current price of $3.00. Within the same time period, sugar has jumped from 9 cents to 20 cents per pound; and soybeans, $3.50 to $7 per bushel. "The futures conference is aimed at corporate marketing, purchasing and finance executives from major firms that handle raw materials. "The goal is to help them hedge against price changes, thus decreasing costs if the firm purchases raw materials or increasing revenues if the firm is a raw material supplier," said the dean. "One reason for the large increase in commodity prices since 1972 has been the substantial increase in world money supplies, particularly in the United States, Europe, and Japan."

Gus stars in Disney production

By SCOTT ANDREWS
Universe Staff Writer

A mule that kicks 100-yard field goals?

That's the premise of "Gus," the latest Walt Disney productions venture. It's true Disney comedy in "Shaggy Dog" style, but, thankfully, with less slapstick than several recent Disney comedies.

The cast in itself makes the picture. Ed Asner as the failing football team's owner;
Don Knotts as the coach; Tim Conway and Tom Bosley (of Happy Days) as mule thieves; and Gary Grimes as a surprisingly believable
Yugoslavian mule owner.

Fortunately though, it's not a Don Knotts movie or a Tim Conway movie.
Emphasis is placed on the idea of a mule rocketing a losing team (the California Atoms) to victory in the Super Bowl (against the also non-existent Michigan Mammoth) by kicking field goals from anywhere on the field.

Although the plot is predictable (Conway and Bosley switch Gus for a non-football playing mule and the real Gus is found just in time to be flown in by helicopter to win the Super Bowl), the cast and special effects make up for the lack of inspiration on the part of the screenplay.

It may not go down as an all-time Disney great comedy, but it provides better entertainment for the money than most current movie fare.

Terrorists claim NYC bombs

NEW YORK (AP)—Small incendiary devices stuffed in cigarette packs went off in four department stores in the vicinity of Madison Square Garden today. Only slight damage was reported, police said.

A Puerto Rican terrorist group claimed responsibility, saying it was a protest against 22 Puerto Rican delegates attending the Democratic National Convention.
The New York Post said it received a telephone call from FALN—the Puerto Rican Army of National Liberation—directing it to a phone booth where a communique was found concerning the devices.

lderly assured income by prof's plan

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP)—A Wharton School professor has devised a financial plan that would enable elderly homeowners to obtain a regular income from the equity in their homes while being assured of lifelong occupancy. If implemented, the plan has the potential for greatly relieving the financial problems of elderly persons while securely assuring them of independence and dignity. The plan, which is being developed by Professor John C. Williams, who holds the chair in banking and finance at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, has put his plan in the hands of the Federal Reserve Board for review.
The plan, he said, one large bank has seriously studied the plan, and many individuals have expressed interest, but it is not yet being adopted, even though he believes it can be combined with actuarial assurance equal to life insurance policies.

Williams' ideas, contained in "The Bulletin" of the New York University Graduate School of Business Administration, include two new financial instruments, a split equity plan and a nonrepayable loan plan.

In the split equity concept, the equity of a property is divided in two components, a lifetime interest or right of occupancy, and the residual equity, which is the right to dispose of the property after the occupant's death. To implement, the elderly occupant sells the residual equity, but instead of obtaining a lump sum payment from the buyer, he or she receives a lifetime annuity or guaranteed income.

Upon the death of the occupant, the buyer ceases further payments and takes possession, sometimes obtaining a more substantial property for the money than would have been possible in a conventional transaction.

The possibility exists, of course, that the elderly owner or owners will enjoy a life span greater than those listed in the actuarial tables, in which the buyer would have to pay a larger sum.

Large institutions, however, can benefit from the laws of large numbers, which generally dictate that extremes average out.

The nonrepayable loan, the other instrument in the professor's concept, is simply a loan secured by a mortgage repayable only upon the death of the borrower or on the prior sale of the property.
Guttag believes the time is ripe for the development of these instruments in the United States.

"With the proportion of elderly in the population steadily rising and concern for wealth bestowals through estates declining, the potential market is increasing rapidly," he said.

There is also a strong social interest in the development of the instruments, he believes, because the aged comprise a large part of the poverty problem. The median income for households over 65 is less than half that for all households.

Despite the income problems of many elderly, home ownership is higher than for the population in general.

Warning given WWII vets about life insurance policy

The Veterans Administration is renewing an effort to advise World War II veterans of the high and increasing cost of holding GI term life insurance.

VA Administrator Richard L. Roudsbush said, "I am greatly concerned that large numbers of World War II veterans have not yet heeded our warning about the heavy premium increases they must pay unless they convert their policies."

To help with this, Roudsbush announced a new National Service Life Insurance information booklet to help urge veterans to convert their GI life insurance into the so-called "permanent" plans.

Roudsbush pointed out that a World War II
"V" policyholder pays $12.70 a month at age 50 for a $10,000 NSLI term insurance policy.

At age 60 that monthly premium jumps to $26 a month and at age 65 to $39.70 monthly.

A veteran who lived to age 90 would be paying $554 a month for his $10,000 term policy, Roudsbush said.

Roudsbush explained that GI term insurance was designed to be used only for a few years, affording veterans a maximum of protection at minimum cost during the readjustment years after separation from service and while raising a family. By converting his term insurance to one of the VA's permanent plans, Roudsbush said, the veteran pays premiums which, while slightly higher initially, do not increase as the years go by.

In the case of a National Service Life Insurance policyholder with a World War II
"V" series policy, conversion to a $10,000, modified life-70 plan at age 50 would result in a premium of $17.70 a month throughout the insured's lifetime.

If the same policyholder waits until his 60th birthday to convert, the monthly premium would be $26.40.

Oil money flows in London: Arabs splurge petrodollars

By ED BLANCHIE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP)—Rich Arabs are flocking to London on a petrodollar spending spree, buying up everything from candy to corporations and looking into farmland.

One Arab in flowing robes walked into a London men's shop last week and bought 750 pairs of cotton underpants for $2,700.

Another nonchalantly paid $1.98 million for a colonnaded mansion in the green sweep of Buckinghamshire, west of London.

He had to pay extra for the furniture, but the seven-bedroom "holiday home" came with a swimming pool, stables, a vast master bathroom in black Italian marble and a fully equipped communications center.

Three anonymous cousins of a Middle East millionaire flew into town in a private jet to do some shopping. They spent $900,000 in six hours on items including Cartier jewels, sunkin baths, antique furniture, Savile Row suits and an umbrella stand.

Harrod's department store in London,
where Queen Elizabeth II does her shopping, said one Arab bought chocolates worth $3,600 and sent them home in his private jet.

The spending spree began about two years ago when the Arabs were attracted by favorable interest rates and good bargains in the depressed property market.

The boom quickened last year when Beirut, the sheikhs' usual playground, became a battleground in Lebanon's bloody civil war.

"They headed for Europe, and London especially," said Suzanne Collis, a 26-year-old real estate agent who has sold houses worth $5.4 million to oil sheikhs in the last year.

"Many of the houses they buy are holiday homes where they'll spend the summer. Few of them want places more than 40 minutes drive by Rolls Royce from London," she said. The British government has estimated last month that Arabs spend around $360 million a year in Britain giving its anemic economy a healthy boost.

New baseball contract OK'd

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—
The Major League Players Association agreed to a four-year contract with baseball club owners today, apparently ending 13 months of negotiations.

The contract was announced by Marvin Miller, the association's executive director, who said it was approved by the group's executive board and now must be ratified by the full membership.

The six-member Player Relations Committee, representing the owners, voted unanimously to approve and the full complement of 24 owners will meet here Wednesday to ratify the agreement.

Miller was asked if the contract was over.
"I believe so," he said. No details of the agreement were announced but it was reported that the contract called for a six-year reserve clause and a 29 per cent increase in pension benefits.

Students need to be more aware of deceptive selling practices going on in Utah County, according to Ombudsman Ray Smith.

"There is one business in particular that we are concerned about," Smith said. The price is a call people's homes and say they are taking a survey. People who answer the telephone survey questions are rewarded with a gift certificate for a low-cost item. The certificate must be redeemed at the store, Smith said.

When the individual turns in the certificate he is met with a high pressure sales pitch to buy a "lifetime supply" of soap, Smith said. By so doing, he receives a first gift, such as a vacuum cleaner or movie projector.

The high pressure sales tactics are not illegal, Smith said. But the individual should be aware that he has the three-day right to recession even though it is neither mentioned in the contract nor disclosed by the salesman.

Because the person is lured into the store through a free gift, he does not go in with the purpose of buying something.

"Thus the situation is parallel to a salesman approaching him at his home and he should be told about the right to recession of the contract," Smith said.

Smith said there have been three complaints about the business this week. "And we only get the tip of the iceberg, so there are bound to be more rate people than that."

The organization also has an outlet in Salt Lake and several neighboring states, according to John W. Rolly, administrative secretary of the Department of Business Regulation Trade Commission Consumer Affairs Division in Salt Lake City.

Rolly's office has not filed an action against the company because not enough complaints have been filed, Rolly said.

According to Rolly, the organization has operated in Utah before under several different names. "Whenever they are ordered to close down or the people run them out, they just start again under a different name."

According to Albert Haines, Orem City, his office is responsible to protect the consumer against criminal fraud and to regulate business in keeping with those responsibilities. He said receiving the requisite number of complaints Haines' office run an audit on the business.

The audit found that the business was in violation of the business license ordinance. It was operating under a different name than under which it was licensed Haines said.

The store was temporarily closed down, added. However, they have now complied with ordinance and have reopened. He said he talked with the owner and he seems very anxious to remain in business and obtain the good of the community.

"As far as our office is concerned, there seem to be no serious problems," Haines said. On the question of sales practices, Haines said "It is a question of miscommunication by the purchaser and the salesman."

prof converts coal to methane University scientist has developed new catalysts more efficient than commercially available for converting coal into clean-burning "natural" gas.

Professor Calvin Bartholomew, an engineering professor, said the new nickel alloy catalysts show higher rates of reaction and one, nickel, is nearly 100 percent effective in producing methane. Commercial catalysts are normally 80 to 90 percent selective.

The scientist is in the second year of a two-year contract for $100,000 from the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). The ERDA-supported university study in the country dealing with production of methane (synthetic natural gas) using alloy catalysts and new monolithic catalyst supports. Catalysts are metals used to speed up reactions without being consumed by the reactions, Dr. Bartholomew explained. He and a team of researchers are working with combinations of metals to obtain more active, selective and economical catalysts.

"We estimate that these improved catalysts might save as much as $7 to $10 million in initial costs and $1 million in yearly operating costs for a plant large enough to supply synthetic natural gas for a city of one million people," the professor said.

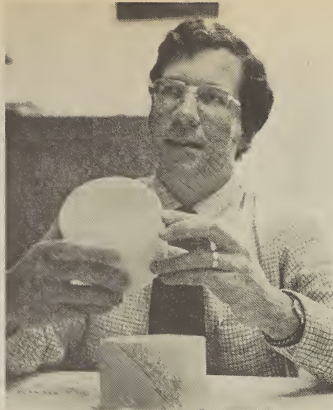

Dr. Bartholomew serves on a national committee on coal gasification, the American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM).

Dr. Bartholomew's research is playing an important part in the development of coal gasification as a workable energy source. Coal gasification is important to the nation because synthetic natural gas promises to be a major source of fuel for the future.

Energy experts predict that known reserves of natural gas in the United States will be exhausted within 20 years, he said. Moreover, there will be a critical shortage within 10 years.

"The nation's reserves of coal, depending on how they are used, will last approximately two to three centuries. As gasification techniques improve, coal will become an increasingly valuable source of gas for use in home and industry," Dr. Bartholomew said.

Gasification, rather than direct combustion of coal, is also very important because of environmental considerations, Dr. Bartholomew added.

Dr. Calvin Bartholomew explains newly developed catalysts for converting coal gases into clean burning methane.

Professor Sundance to show 'Oklahoma' in summer theatre production

The popular musical will feature Cameron Garnick and Kira Pratt as curly and Laurey, the play's leading couple. Theatre veterans Jayne Luke and Jim Farnsworth play the comic duo, Ado Annie and Will Parker.

Lars Christensen, a familiar name to Utah audiences, will direct the musical. Christensen has previously directed "Little Mary Sunshine," another Sundance production.

Oklahoma will run continuously on odd-numbered days except Monday and Sunday through Labor Day. On the even dates a musical review called the "Sundance '76" will be presented. Both "Oklahoma" and "Sundance '76" will be pre-empted on Monday nights for a family production called "Don't Count Your Chickens Until They Cry Wolf."

The award-winning Orem High School Marching band will present a "Patriots and Pioneers" Concert July 21 at Orem City Park.

The concert will be sponsored by the Orem City Library according to Librarian Dick Beeson.

The concert is free of charge and open to the public and will begin at 7:00 p.m., said Beeson.

The mid-summer concert is intended to pay tribute to the events celebrated by the July 4 and 24 holidays. Patriotic marches and selections from the music of George M. Cohan will be featured.

The Orem High School Band won Region four first place honors at both the stage band and the concert band festivals held this past year. The band is one of the largest marching bands in the state. It is directed by Wes Barry with Larry Hill assisting.

Theatre veterans Jayne Luke and Jim Farnsworth will perform in the Sundance Summer Theatre presentation of "Oklahoma" which opens tonight.

Purchasers get certification

Four members of the BYU Purchasing Department have earned the Certified Purchasing Manager designation from the National Association of Purchasing Management, Inc. (NAPM).

Cornelius R. (Neal) Peterson, Lawrence K. Egbert, Robert H. Booth and Gerald W. Surratt received certification after qualifying through a combination of exams, education, seminars, experience and contributions to the profession, according to F.J. Winters, executive vice president of NAPM.

"The plan is designed to increase acceptance of the professional status of purchasing by business management and the public, and that certification will enhance individual professional competence in the field, according to Mr. Winters.

PAULINE FREDERICK

Pauline Frederick covered the United Nations and the global scene for over twenty years as a correspondent for NBC. Significant happenings on which she reported include the Korean War (while at ABC), the four middle eastern wars, the Congo War, the Cuban missile crisis, and the entry of the People's Republic of China into the United Nations.

Through her personal energy and ability, she opened the field of broadcast journalism to women. She has received a number of prestigious awards for professional excellence, and twenty honorary degrees.

Now serving National Public Radio as an analyst of international affairs, Miss Frederick comes to BYU directly from the United Nations Security Council, where she is covering the Uganda-Israel controversy.

Her talk will focus on the important challenges facing the next president of the United States: the matter of international interdependence; the relations between the industrial and emerging nations; the "uneasy truces which need to be turned to workable settlements;" and the Problems of proliferation of nuclear power, human rights, energy, and pollution.

Dracula's Castle on troupe's tour

The BYU American Folk Dancers left for their 12th consecutive European tour on Sunday.

The folk dancers will perform in England, France, Holland, Israel, and will visit Dracula's Castle in Romania. This will be the first trip to Romania by the troupe.

The dancers will perform in Paris on Bastille Day (France's Independence Day), and will be featured for one week in a festival in Brunssum, Holland.

After performances in Belgium, the folk dancers will fly to Israel where they will be hosted by the Haifa Municipality Dancers, who appeared in the BYU international folk festival last fall. This is the BYU troupe's third tour of Israel which will include performances in Haifa, Tel Aviv, and Jerusalem.

The 30-member troupe was invited by Romania to represent the U.S. during its Bicentennial year.

The troupe, under the direction of Mary Bee Jensen, will perform American dances while in Europe.

These include the square dance, pioneer dances, the New England contradance and clog dances from the Smokey Mountains which are a combination of the Indian buck step and American tap dances.

Other dances include Hawaiian dances, and contemporary dances such as the Swing, Charleston, and the Carolina Clogs.

The dancers will be featured on national television in every country they visit. Brian Capner of BYU-TV (U) will film a TV documentary as the troupe performs throughout Europe.

Charlie (Blake) Hard Horn, a Mandan Indian from North Dakota, will be featured in traditional Indian hoop and war dances as well as performing his speciality rope and whip acts.

BYU Folk Dancers perform square dance during Provo's 4th of July celebration. They left Sunday for a European tour including stops in Romania and Israel.

Y student gets fix on stars; designs data recording unit

A computer system designed and built by a BYU senior is helping astronomers at the school's observatory efficiently record up to 10 items of data about a single star.

Using a remote control data entry device, scientists can take a fix on a star, enter its designated number, and the system will record the number, the time of day in both the 24-hour and Julian systems, angle of the telescope to the star, and the photon count. Five other data items are as yet unassigned.

A variety of special filters fitted on the telescope can be used to measure the wave lengths of light emitted by a star, enabling astronomers to determine its composition.

The system was designed and built by David Phillips of Orem, who will be graduated in August with a degree in electronic engineering technology.

On the basis of the project and his scholastic abilities, Phillips has been accepted at the University of Utah Medical School, Department of Medical Biophysics and Computing. Included is a full fellowship to continue his studies.

The system consists of a computer logic unit, remote control data entry device, power supply, photon counter and digital printer. Phillips designed and built all but the counter and printer which were available commercially.

Performance requirements were provided by Dr. Harold McNamara, professor of physics and astronomy, who left the actual design and construction to Phillips.

Dr. McNamara said the system has doubled the speed of observation techniques.

"We formerly had a very complicated and bulky device using outdated transistors capable of performing a few of the functions of our new system, but it did not have a remote control capability," he said.

The logic system of the new equipment contains five "boards" with a total of about 150 integrated circuits. Each of the circuits contains the elements of hundreds of individual transistors.

Using the new equipment, said Dr. McNamara, astronomers can remain in position at the telescope while entering data, thus eliminating time wasted by moving back and forth to the computer system.

Since the same data can be computed by manual processes, the principal advantage of the new system is time saved, he pointed out.

A few other observatories have similar systems, according to Dr. McNamara, but they are all custom made since such equipment is not yet available on a commercial basis.

Phillips said the design phase required about 80 hours to complete, with actual construction and "de-bugging" operations occupying his working time the remainder of the school year. He is employed part-time as an electronics technician by the Department of Physics and Astronomy.

NASC to reaccredit university

BYU has been reaccredited by the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges, Pres. Dallin H. Oaks announced recently.

Reporting on its March 23-25 campus visit, the 15-member accrediting team noted the impressive accomplishments of faculty, staff and students, and the continued growth in stature of the University, Pres. Oaks said.

In its first campus evaluation during the Oaks administration, the team also praised the academic climate, beautiful facilities and the high morale and unity of students, faculty and other workers at BYU.

Accreditation is done periodically, at least once every ten years. BYU received its last accreditation in 1966.

Pres. Oaks also reported that the BYU-Hawaii campus has been notified of full accreditation in a separate committee study by its accreditation body, the Western Association of Schools and Colleges.

Speaker selected for Y convocation

Dr. Robert K. Thomas, BYU academic vice-president, has been selected to deliver the commencement address at BYU's summer convocation Aug. 13, Pres. Oaks announced Monday.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie of the Council of the Twelve will preside over the exercises beginning at 9:30 a.m. in the Marriott Center.

The traditional academic procession of BYU administration officials, guests, faculty and graduates will leave the Smoot Administration Building at 9 a.m.

Dr. Thomas, who began teaching in BYU's English department in 1951, was instrumental in the founding of the BYU Honors Program. He won a Danforth Teacher Grant in 1957-58.

He used the grant to continue his doctoral program at Columbia. He completed his Ph.D. in American literature in 1967.

In 1961, BYU students elected him "Teacher of the Year."

Dr. Thomas was appointed by Pres. Ernest L. Wilkinson

as assistant vice-president at BYU in 1966 and received the Maesser Award for Distinguished Teaching that year. In 1967 he replaced retiring Dr. Earl Crockett as academic vice-president.

He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, Blue Key and Phi Eta Sigma. He has written for LDS Church publications and served throughout the West as consultant on higher education administration.

Sister Lee speaks tomorrow

Freda Joan Lee, wife of former President Harold B. Lee, will speak on "Opportunities, Privileges and Responsibilities of LDS Women in Today's World" Wednesday at 12 noon in 347 ELWC.

The speech is part of the Women's Awareness Lecture Series sponsored by the ASBYU Women's Office, according to Diane Curtis, Woman's Office vice president.

Sister Lee was born in both the Church community, Miss Curtis said. She served as supervisory primary education in Jordan School District, Lake County, and general board of Y.W.M.I.A.

Sister Lee was born in Provo and raised in Provo and Sandy for several years and President Lee married in 1963.

Y Writers' Convention offers technical advice

Instruction in writing techniques ranging from scholarly and personal history writing to television and motion picture writing will be offered at BYU's second annual writers' convention July 28-30.

The Rocky Mountain Writers' convention will provide a climate for helpful interaction among professional writers, as well as an encouraging setting for the novice writer, according to Gary Bascom, program administrator for Special Courses and Conferences at BYU.

This year's convention will feature Dr. William Stafford, National Book Award winner, poet laureate of Oregon, professor of English at Lewis and Clark College at Portland, Oregon, and coeditor of "Modern Poetry of Western America," a nationally acclaimed publication.

In addition, Leroi "Tex" Smith, editorial director of Challenge Publications, author, free-lance writer and writing consultant, will present workshops each afternoon of the convention, Bascom said.

The fee for the event is $28. One semester hour of university credit is available in English or Communications by special arrangement, said Bascom.

For further information, write to Rocky Mountain Writers' Convention, Special Courses and Conferences, 242 HRCB, BYU, Provo.

Olympic decisions concern President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today urged American Olympic officials to seek a reversal of a tentative decision that would result in barring athletes from Taiwan from competing in the Montreal Olympics.

In announcing this, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said it was too soon to speculate on whether Ford would recommend that American athletes boycott the games if the tentative arrangements stand.

However, Nessen said the President has no authority to keep Americans out of international competition scheduled to begin in Montreal on Saturday.

Nessen said Ford telephoned Phillip Krumm, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, in Montreal to voice his objections to the tentative agreement worked out between Canadian government and the International Olympic Committee. Nessen said Ford urged that Krumm exert his influence to win a reversal of the decision so athletes from all countries could participate.

The tentative decision, announced Sunday in Montreal by the IOC committee, is subject to approval by the full IOC council.

Ford was quoted by Nessen as saying that the action that would result in barring Taiwan was "a bad decision and it sets a very bad precedent if it is upheld."

ASBYU STUDENT GOVERNMENT

late summer interim classes
1976 Late Summer Interim Classes are selected two-hour academic courses taught during the week following August graduation at Brigham Young University. These classes can help students toward earlier graduation and aid those students who wish to complete many of their general requirements outside the regular academic year.
Classes will be held August 14-21, 1976 (excluding Sunday, August 15), from 8:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon. Room schedules, first-day assignments, and textbooks needed will be available after Monday, August 2, at Special Courses and Conferences, 242 Herald R. Clark Building.
All classes with fewer than twelve students are subject to cancellation. Tuition for classes will be $70. After August 2 (Monday), a $5 late fee will be charged.
Registration may be completed at Brigham Young University, Department of Special Courses and Conferences, 242 Herald R. Clark Building, Provo, Utah 84602, Telephone (801) 374-1211, Ext. 3556.
Participants of any race, creed, color and ethnic or national origin are accepted for admission to this program provided they maintain the BYU standards of conduct and dress.
Office hours are Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
Refund Policy: A $5 service charge will be made for processing a withdrawal from a credit class even though the student does not complete registration or attend class. Inasmuch as no refunds are granted after 50 percent of the class period has elapsed, it is important that the student notify the Department of Special Courses and Conferences immediately, should he need to withdraw. (Minimum charge is $5.) Phone 374-1211, Ext. 3556.
